ABOUT CAMPAGNOLO. . . .

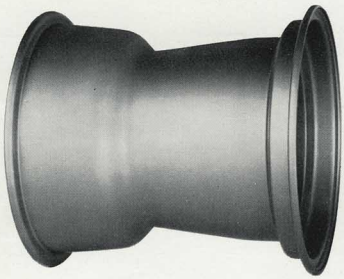

There can be few people who are unaware of the almost legendary reputation which Campagnolo have earned in the world of cycle racing. However, perhaps there are not so many who know that the same company has been manufacturing sand cast and die cast magnesium wheels for both competition and road use for over fifteen years.

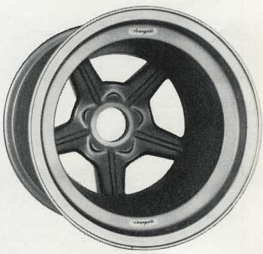

What finer pedigree could one ask for – standard equipment on Lamborghini, Maserati, De Tomaso and Iso. In motor racing, Campagnolo wheels have carried the Ferrari F.1 cars to victory as well as the Autodelta and Abarth teams. It is perhaps not surprising to discover that the most exotic rally car ever built, the Lancia Stratos, is equipped by the works with magnesium wheels from Campagnolo.

MAGNESIUM WHEELS

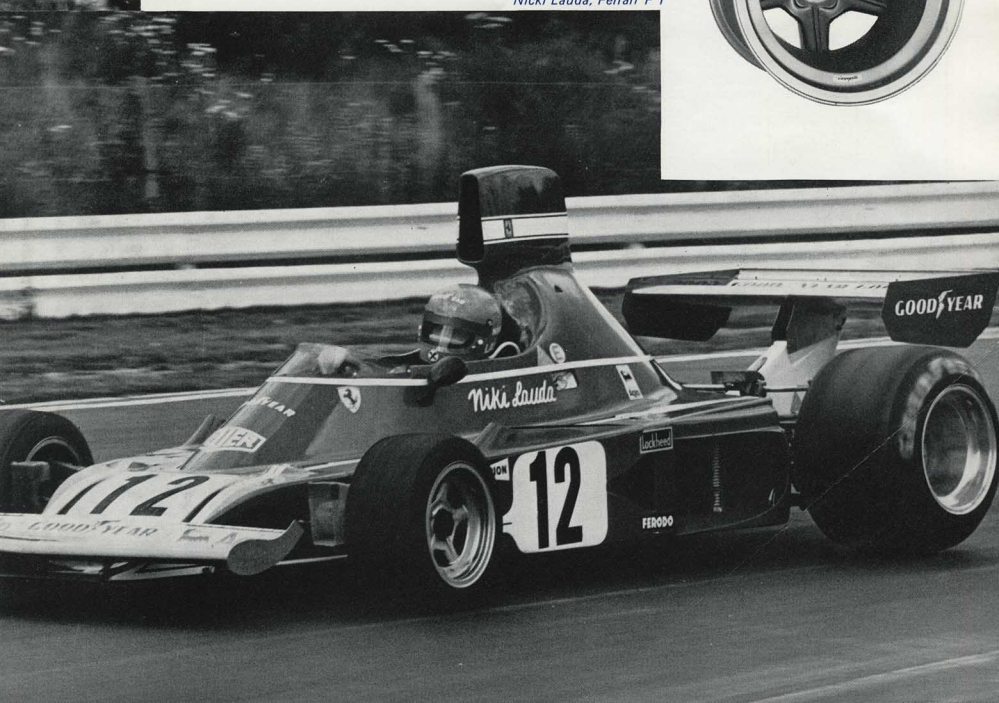

Until now the serious enthusiast has had little or no choice in his selection of a thoroughbred magnesium wheel. Whether it be for motor sport or road use every Campagnolo wheel almost seems to exude pure mechanical finesse.

It is scarcely necessary to mention that every wheel is carefully checked. Tests for dimensional accuracy and for superficial microporosity and micro-cracks are carried out, and every customer is provided with a quality control report as evidence. Sample batches are selected for X-ray examination; in addition wheels are singled out for extreme load testing to destruction. Naturally, each wheel is treated with numerous protective coatings to resist the effect of corrosion.

FOR RALLYING

Campagnolo manufacture a vast range of magnesium wheels. However, the model which will possibly be of the most interest to the rally enthusiast is depicted here. Ideally most components used on a rally car should be as strong and yet as light as possible. Many achieve neither of these objectives and some only one,– not so Campagnolo's model "E". Its thick webbed multi-spoked construction ensures an incredibly strong wheel yet the 6J model weighs in at only 5 Kg.

Model "E" is available to fit the following cars:
